

Delta Air Lines stewardess Lynn Sargent poses with Capt. Harold Rowley after their plane was the target of an unsuccessful hijacker.

Pilot ignores 'biggest gun'

MIAMI (AP)—A hijacker carrying "the biggest gun you ever saw" tried to divert a Delta airliner to Cuba Monday, but he looked so harmless to Capt. Harold Rowley that the pilot ignored him and took the 69 passengers to Miami as scheduled.

Kenneth McPeck, 31, of Orchard Lake, Mich., was sitting quietly, a sawed-off, double-barreled shotgun stowed under his seat, when police came aboard after the plane landed. The gun had been unloaded and the shells were in his suitcase.

"We watched him through the cockpit window," Rowley said. "He wasn't threatening us, and we were three minutes at most from the ground, so we continued on our landing pattern."

"Since he didn't start any action, I saw no reason to pull out."

McPeck, who was accompanied by his 3-year-old son, was charged by the FBI with attempting to commit aircraft piracy, using force and frightening the crew.

The only one who admitted to being frightened, however, was Lynn Sargent, a tall, brown-haired stewardess from Brockton, N.J.

The plane, a Convair 440 flying nonstop from Detroit to Miami with 69 paying passengers, two pass riders and a crew of six, had started its final landing approach when McPeck turned on his seat lights at the rear of the first class section.

"He asked me to close the curtain between the first class and tourist compartments," Miss Sargent said. "When I refused, he pulled this gun out of a brown suitcase under the seat, jabbed it into my stomach, and said to tell the pilot to go to Cuba."

"Then he jammed it harder, and I knew he wasn't kidding. I walked to the cockpit fast."

Rowley said Miss Sargent "banged on the door, came in and said there was a man out there with the biggest gun you ever saw." The door locked automatically behind her.

Inaugural to face opposition

WASHINGTON (AP)—Anti-war groups whose peace demonstrations in Chicago blossomed into violence claimed Monday they have official sanction for a "counterinaugural" parade down Pennsylvania Avenue the day before President-elect Nixon's inauguration.

The word came from a leader of one of the groups, David Dellinger, 32, head of the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam.

Emerging from a negotiating session on permits with a government representative, Dellinger told newsmen:

"The government recognized the force of the peoples feelings while American soldiers and Vietnamese are dying in an imperialistic war and that the anti-war feelings of the American people cannot be suspended during the time it takes the government to change hands."

"In recognition of the determination of the people to halt the war the government has recognized our right to march down Pennsylvania Avenue on Sunday, the day before Nixon takes office."

Joining the NMC for a three-day program, which Dellinger said would be aimed "not at personalities but in support of issues," will be members of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the New Party, the New York chapters of the Women's Liberation movement, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and some units of the Students for a Democratic Society.

Permission to erect a massive tent 100 X 300 feet in ground size, near the inaugural line of march, to be used as a staging area and as the site of a "counterinaugural" ball.

Plane slams into ocean, 35 aboard

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A Scandinavian Airlines DC8 with 35 persons aboard crashed into the Pacific Ocean Monday night while attempting a landing.

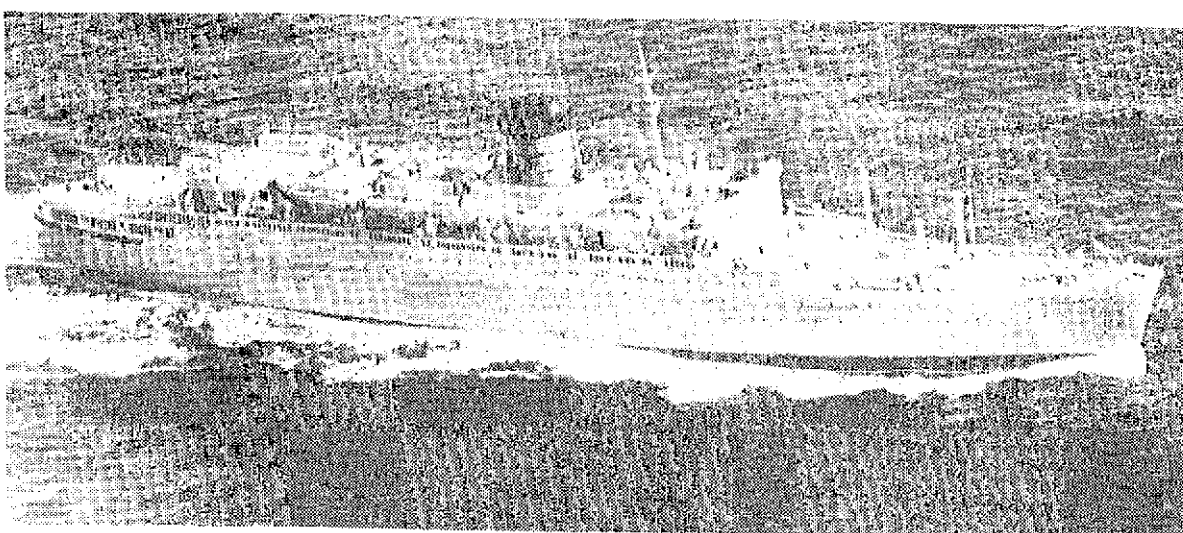

The coast guard said it understood there were some survivors.

The airline said the plane was incoming from Copenhagen via Seattle. The 35 aboard included a crew of seven.

The airplane crashed about a mile off Los Angeles International Airport in the rain-swept choppy waters.

The coast guard said it had reports from helicopters sent to the scene that rafts were in the water.

Enroute to the scene were coast guard cutters and fire department boats plus various private craft.

Cunard Line's 21,000 cruise liner Carmania ran aground late Sunday on a reef of coral three miles south of San Salvador in the Bahamas, a company spokesman said Monday.

(UPI Telephoto)

Ship continues to 'rock' while hung up on reef

MIAMI (AP)—The 471 passengers danced, sipped drinks and lounged on the sun-splashed decks of the British cruise ship Carmania Monday, not caring that the vessel was stuck high and dry on a Bahamian reef.

At least, that's the way staff officer Peter Ekson described the situation aboard his 22,600-ton ship, owned by the Cunard Lines. "Everyone is carrying on the way they usually do," Ekson said in a ship-to-shore conversation. "They're all very cheerful. We have plenty of everything."

Just 18 hours after starting a 12-day Caribbean cruise from Florida, the Carmania made a landfall at roughly the same spot Christopher Columbus did in 1492 when he thought he was in the Orient.

The Carmania was aground from bow to bridge five miles south of Cockburn Town on San Salvador Island, 375 miles southeast of Miami.

Two tugs, The Rawsea from Key West and the Alice Moran from Bermuda, were en route to pull the Carmania free. "We hope to get her off today and continue the cruise," Ekson said.

Ben Asterige, director of the Bahamas Air-Sea Rescue Service, said the Carmania apparently moved close to the beach so passengers could look at a monument on the spot where the Olympic Torch was passed shortly before the Mexico City games.

"She went in too far," he said, "and there was a strong offshore tide."

"Boats have been pulled off that reef before. The sand is smooth. The only trouble is I understand she went aground at high tide."

If the Carmania had stuck on low tide, the rising waters would have aided a rescue effort.

No assistance was asked, although the Carmania lay not far from a U.S. Coast Guard base and missile tracking station on San Salvador.

The aging liner originally planned to sail Dec. 29. But after the passengers were aboard, the Coast Guard canceled the voyage when it found potential safety hazards in violation of the Safety of Life at Sea Convention which took effect in this country Nov. 2.

After a week in drydock, the vessel passed the test and sailed at 5 p.m. Saturday. Most of her passengers are Americans.

Sirhan's defense centers on intent

LOS ANGELES (AP)—There will be no denial that Sirhan Bishara Sirhan fired the shot that killed Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Bishara's chief defender said Monday.

That defense position would make Bishara's "intent" the main issue in the trial of the young Jordanian who is charged with murder.

As the selection process continued, Mrs. Rose Malina, a widow and a nurse, became the first prospective juror to be accepted by the defense.

Questioned about which newspapers she reads and what broadcast stations she listens to,

Mrs. Malina underwent additional private questioning in the judge's chambers and again in open court.

At one point she was asked by a prosecuting attorney if she would give Sirhan "some benefit" because of his youth. She said no.

Attorney Grant B. Cooper said in questioning the first prospective juror in the case that commission of the act of shooting is not enough to constitute guilt of murder.

"There will be no denial of the fact that our client, Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, fired the shot that killed the late senator and injured others," Cooper said.

Sirhan, 24, is accused of shooting Kennedy June 5 after the senator had claimed victory in California's Democratic primary election. Sirhan also is charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder against five other persons who were wounded.

The trial's fourth day began with rejection of a defense motion challenging the jury selection system on grounds that it produces juries not representative of a cross section of the community.

New phone book now obsolete

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Defense Department issued a new 400-page telephone book Monday that will be outdated almost immediately—at a cost of $40,000.

It contains the names of the Johnson administration civilian officials, many of whom will be leaving office after Monday when Richard M. Nixon becomes 37th president of the United States.

manager at WCBZ-TV, general manager of WXIX in Milwaukee, and as a vice president of the network.

He and his wife, Deborah, have two daughters and a son.

Nixon's press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, said the meeting with Negro leaders was part of an effort to achieve open discussion with minority groups.

On hand for that session were:

John Murphy of the National Newspaper Association, Sandy Ray of the National Baptist convention, the Rev. Ralph Abernathy of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Nathan Wright of the Black Power Conference, Hobson Reynolds of the National Negro Elks and John Johnson, publisher of Ebony Magazine.

53rd Farm Show attracts crowds

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—Favored by clear, cold weather, vast crowds jammed exhibit areas of the 53rd Pennsylvania Farm Show Monday.

Doors were opened for the first time to the general public after Sunday's preview in which Gov. Shafer and Agriculture Secretary Leland H. Bull opened the farm extravaganza with formal ceremonies in the arena.

Sunday's opening program, as well as the first public exhibit Monday, included performances by the state police rodeo team.

Although temperatures stayed in the 20s, the sun shined in Harrisburg for the first time in many years on opening day for a farm show. Heavy snow inhibited crowds on the first day of the great harvest festival one year ago.

Presentation of Master Farmer award will highlight today's program. The group of winners will be feted at a luncheon at a Harrisburg motel.

Court accepts Powell issue

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court decided Monday on a thorough airing of Adam Clayton Powell's exclusion from the House, a case that could put the court on a collision course with Congress.

The court acted without comment in a simple order, shifting a hearing on his ouster appeal from the summary calendar, where argument is limited to 30 minutes for each side, to the general calendar where it can run an hour or more.

Surplus predicted this year

WASHINGTON (AP)—With apparent private assurances of support from President-elect Nixon, President Johnson will recommend continuation of the 10 per cent income surtax in order to leave his Republican successor a balanced budget.

The nation's tax payers will get the official word formally in Johnson's farewell State of the Union message Tuesday night.

Congress had decreed that the tax, currently yielding about $13 billion a year, would end next June 30.

In delicate political maneuvering over the past two weeks, Johnson has been trying to get a public commitment from Nixon. But Nixon, who called during the presidential campaign for an end to the levy, has made no such pledge.

Both Johnson and Nixon want to get rid of the tax. But Johnson seems to have convinced the President-elect that continuing it is the only practical means of balancing the budget.

Breaking tradition for an outgoing President, Johnson will personally deliver his last State of the Union talk to a joint session of Congress tonight. The 45-minute message will be nationally televised and broadcast.

Johnson was heard by reporters to tell Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D-N. C., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, that "We are going to have a small surplus this year and a small surplus next year."

Nixon will have difficulty in altering the basic assumptions on spending and revenue made by the departing administration for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The budget, to be submitted to Congress Wednesday, is expected to call for about $195 billion in outlays for the next fiscal year. Any surplus was expected to range lower than $3 billion.

This presumably takes into account estimated expenditures on the Vietnam war, currently close to $28 billion annually.

The premature disclosure of Johnson's tax intentions led some observers to speculate that Johnson might be planning to use the talk for some other major announcement on which he wants full attention to fall.

There have been recurrent reports that some significant withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam might be in prospect this year.

Johnson, of course, has information about the military situation in Vietnam, on which Nixon presumably has been briefed, providing the background for any move he might choose to make on the course of the year.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R. N.Y., called on Johnson to make public the report on tax reform.

TV executive to direct USIA

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect Nixon Monday named network executive Frank Shakespeare, the man who shaped his campaign television programming, to become director of the U. S. Information Agency.

Shakespeare said that as director of the government's overseas news and broadcasting operations he will seek to have the American story told truthfully and in a fashion that will overcome what he called a "stereotyped image" of materialism and uncertainty.

He is resigning as president of the Columbia Broadcasting System Television Services Division, which is in charge of international operation.

Nixon disclosed his choice as he held a final round of conferences at his Hotel Pierre headquarters and prepared to fly to Key Biscayne, Fla., to polish his inaugural address. The trip was a last minute decision.

Frank Shakespeare

Nixon was to leave late Monday night and was expected to return to New York some time Friday. His final New York conferences were with a group of seven leaders of Negro organizations and with Sargent Shriver, the U. S. ambassador to France, who is to retain that post in the new administration.

Shakespeare, 44, was Nixon's television advisor during the presidential race and developed the format for question and answer sessions which was a key facet of the campaign.

It was his advice which led Nixon to make an unprecedented group announcement of his cabinet selection before a nationwide television audience.

Shakespeare said communication is a basic element of a successful presidency and the use of television is essential to the "ability to govern" in this era.

He said it is yet to be determined whether in the USIA role he can continue to advise Nixon on the use of television.

Discussing his new job, Shakespeare said the function of the USIA is "to tell the story of the United States to the other peoples of the world" and that means covering shortcomings as well as favorable news.

He rejected the term propaganda as a description of the agency's function.

"I think if we are going to tell the story of the United States we have to tell the truth," Shakespeare said.

Shakespeare is a native of New York City, a graduate of Holy Cross College. He went to work for CBS 19 years ago and has served as general sales

Bastion of federal bureaucracy

Poverty offices target of denunciation by organized poor

(Editor's note: This is the second of five parts dealing with the failure of the government's vaunted "war on poverty" and the approach to the problem. President-elect Richard M. Nixon has promised to take.)

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
Offaway News Service
Washington Bureau

When the poor people were storming the bastions of federal bureaucracy here last spring, the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), headquarters of the war on poverty, did not escape their wrath.

Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, the soft-spoken, stocky leader of the Poor People's Campaign, told OEO officials with special bitterness, "you have failed us."

"Four years ago we had hope," said Abernathy. "We thought that an Office of Economic Opportunity would provide us a doorway into American society. But the OEO became the middleman captured by the myriad of anti-poverty agencies that continued their traditional and abusive way of dealing with poor people."

There is much speculation in Washington today about the fate that awaits the OEO after Jan. 20. The Office has been blamed for many of the failures and scandals of the war on poverty and received few kudos from either poor or politicians.

OEO officials, not

Post owner's son doing 'his thing'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The son of the owner of the Washington Post enterprises began training as a police recruit Monday because he wants to "do something constructive."

Donald E. Graham, 23-year-old Harvard graduate and Vietnam combat veteran, signed up last week for the 15-week course that could put him on a beat in the capital's crime plagued streets.

"It struck me that joining the department was one very good way to learn about Washington and to do something constructive," he said.

"I don't expect that I'm going to be a career policeman. I do expect eventually to be on the newspaper," he added.

Graham is the eldest of three sons—there's an older sister—of Mrs. Katherine E. Graham, president of the Washington Post Co. It includes among other interests, the city's only morning newspaper, Newsweek magazine and a television station.

unexpectedly, dispute the charge that they have failed the poor. They believe the Office has had a definite impact on poverty as well as on Washington's tradition-bound bureaucracy, and that it has given real "bargaining power" to the poor for the first time in American history.

Robert A. Levine, Assistant Director for Research, Plans, Programs and Evaluation at OEO, points to the sharp decline recently in the number of Americans living in poverty as one indicator of success.

The latest figures show a 3.8 million drop, from 29.7 million in 1966 to 25.9 million in 1967.

In recent interview, Levine admitted the drop was probably due partly to a "hot" economy, but he added, "I think we can take some of the credit."

"Awakening" of poor
The planning expert also cited the "great awakening" of the poor brought about by the establishment of a billion-dollar Community Action Program in the city ghettos and by the revolutionary principle of "maximum feasible participation" of local residents in the CAP.

"The ghettos were dead politically before OEO programs started," remarked Levine. "This may be the most important thing we've done."

City politicians who have faced hostile crowds and scandals probably disagree. But there is no doubt the principle of "maximum feasible participation" was a revolutionary concept, opening the door to unprecedented political power for the poor.

The influence of OEO on Washington's bureaucracy has been no less revolutionary, according to its spokesmen.

One official working in the Office of Inter-Agency Relations, Robert C. Crawford, said OEO had had a "tremendous impact" in focusing attention on the hard-core poor, producing new approaches, and breaking down inter-agency jealousies and barriers.

"There has been a phenomenal change in attitude among those in the agencies," Crawford remarked.

Among the changes he noted were a "massive increase" in inter-agency meetings, a new willingness to try different approaches, and a real effort to reach out to the poor.

The Labor Department is often cited by OEO officials as an example of the metamorphosis they have worked in Washington bureaucracy. Once oriented toward finding jobs for lower and middle-class white, the Department today spends most of its time, energy, and budget on manpower development and training programs for ghetto blacks and rural poor.

The Department's Employment Service now has offices in ghettos and actually searches out hard-core poor.

Much of this change, OEO officials feel, has come about through the establishment of new programs, conceived, started and developed by the Office and then "spun off," or delegated, to other departments and agencies to administer.

Officials admit failure

But while OEO has undoubtedly provided a badly-needed burst of creativity and a new sense of purpose, it has largely failed to become the "master coordinator" of anti-poverty programs it was originally supposed to be. Even OEO officials admit this.

It did set up a special "Office of Inter-Agency Relations," and it did sit down and negotiate numerous "treaties" with such departments as Housing and Urban Development, Health, Education and Welfare, Commerce and Labor.

In addition, a coordinating mechanism, called the Economic Opportunity Council, was established specifically to marshal all federal resources and mesh together all programs in the war on poverty.

But the Council, according to both OEO officials and Congressional sources, was an "absolute failure;" in fact, President Johnson even failed to appoint an Executive Secretary and the Council has stopped meeting.

Opinions vary considerably as to why OEO failed to fulfill its role of chief coordinator.

Crawford, for example, believes Congress, which created 458 different programs, is as much at fault as anybody.

"The coordinators are bogged down in legislation," he remarked.

Levine, however, who probably has a better over-all view of the "ghastly mess," points to other problems.

In a recent article written for the periodical "The Public Interest," Levine noted that new programs proliferated

"faster than improvements in administrative procedures" and "faster than the number of competent administrators and planners."

Contradiction in role
In an interview with this report, Levine pointed out that there was an inherent contradiction in the role OEO was asked to play.

"You can't both operate programs and coordinate them," he remarked. "You can't be equal and superior at the same time."

Levine feels the primary role of OEO should be one of innovator and "goad."

As innovator, OEO would conceive, set up, and then delegate new programs to other agencies. As goad, it would prod and pressure those agencies to make sure they operated the programs as intended.

Several other top-level officials interviewed agreed with Levine in his conception of the Office's role.

They also took a somewhat philosophical view of the problem of coordination and proliferation of programs. They argue competition among new programs is not all bad and that "there is still room for some creative chaos."

"Some waste is inherent in public competition as well as in private competition," said Levine.

The solution to the problems of management and coordination, they feel, lies mainly with the President.

"What is needed," said one official, "is that the President get involved directly. We need a Wall Rostow or a George McBundy-type at the head of the (Economic Opportunity) Council dedicated to domestic affairs."

Both Rostow and McBundy served as special assistants to President Johnson for national security affairs and had great weight in shaping policy.

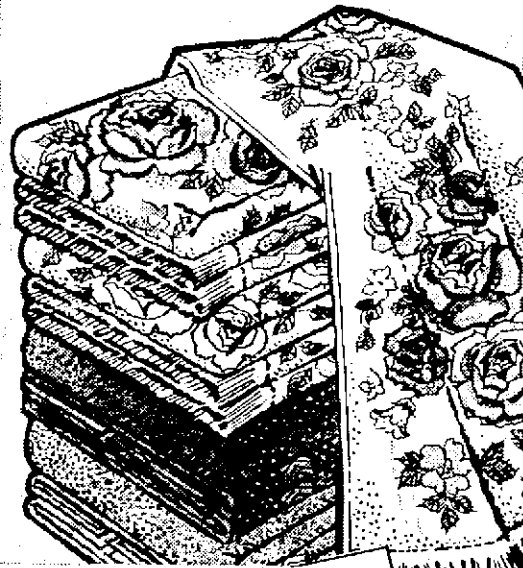

Interesting enough, President-elect Richard M. Nixon recently named Daniel P. Moynihan, head of the Harvard-MIT Joint Center for Urban Studies, as Assistant to the President for Urban Affairs and head of a Cabinet-level Council on Urban Affairs.

This appointment would appear to be precisely what OEO officials were advocating as long ago as last spring.

NEWFOUNDLAND — Some 40 leaders of Wayne and Pike County organizations and official bodies designated four areas of activity for their Wayne-Pike Beautification project during an organizational meeting at the Wallenpaupack Area Joint High School.

Under the direction of Martha Chapman, Home Economist, and Joseph Macialek, Resource Development Agent from Pennsylvania State University, the group planning the 1969 SPARKS campaign (Spring Pick-up and Repair Keeps the Poconos Sparkling) chose as the four major points of study: roadside cleanup; junked automobiles; hiking trails, scenic areas, parks and historical sites; and sign systems.

After a group discussion to select these categories of action, the members, divided into four smaller groups, choosing the subject in which they were especially interested.

Regarding the whole project as an "adventure," they began serious planning for a clean-up week in the spring, tentatively set for May 3 through 10; for mapping every junked automobile in the two counties; for supplementing other organizational efforts to provide sign "malls" and information booths to replace the miles of billboard signing in the Poconos, and to pinpoint for removal "abandoned," broken signs no longer in use; to work out plans for scenic overlooks, picnic grounds; to locate sites of historical events and work toward their restoration.

Special attention
In all, the group discussed eleven areas which needed special attention in the two counties. In addition to the four already decided upon as needing drastic action, there were these problems and proposals: solid waste disposal; use of herbicides; formation of a Tree Commission; restoration or renovation of store fronts; tree, bulb and flowerbox planting.

Robert Ugucioni, executive director of the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau, suggested that each committee member develop "tourist's eyes," thus seeing the area as the visitor sees it.

Interested groups
Represented at the session were leaders of various organizations in the two-county area including the Ladies Auxiliary to the Welcome Lake Fire Company; the Blooming Grove Parent Teacher Association; the Hawley Woman's Club; the Greene-Dreher Woman's Club of Newfoundland; the Wayne County Extension Executive Committee; Farmers Home Administrator; Newfoundland Rotary Club; the PMVB; the Pennsylvania Department of Health; Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council; Milford Garden Club; Palmyra (Wayne) Supervisors; Dreher Township Supervisors; Hawley Chamber of Commerce; the American Youth Hostel Association; Pennsylvania Power and Light; the Honesdale Woman's Club and its Garden Department; both Pike and Wayne County Extension Services; Bethany Woman's Club; and the Penn State Extension Service.

The group agreed that the generation of interest on the part of all residents in the two counties was of prime importance to the SPARKS program. Further planning to involve more people, including youngsters and young adults as well as community leaders, will take place at the February 26 meeting which will begin promptly at 8 p.m. at the Wallenpaupack School.

NEWFOUNDLAND — A prescription which cost him $750 also resulted in his finding the perfect vacation spot—the Poconos—and Wesley Heffner, of Maplewood, N.J., never tired of telling about both happy happenstances.

Heffner was once given a dose of out-of-doors as a prescription for health, and found his medicine could be very pleasant, indeed. He spent 15 happy summers in South Sterling, and his life touched many people, some of whom set their clocks by him; others who called him a "fine Christian gentleman"; and still others who visited the Poconos because he had found such a wellspring of good health and spirit here.

Every Spring, Summer of Fall morning until this past season, the residents of the area knew it was 9 a.m. of the Heffner started for the golf course. He never left before that time, and never was late. And he always went except when, as he put it, "the clouds were very low."

Small wonder that Wesley Heffner boasted of the Poconos. One year, he said, he golfed six days a week for nine straight weeks, or 54 days out of 60. He did not golf on Sunday, no matter how fine the weather or how green the fairways of his favorite course in Mount Pocono.

His two hobbies, golfing and photography, fitted in so completely with vacationing in the mountains. In his 80's, he enjoyed both pastimes thoroughly, and often combined the two.

His 18-holes-a-day prescription came to him just 50 years ago this year, when he was in St. Louis, selling shoes. He was suddenly taken very ill, and he visited a doctor in that city who gave him a prescription that, he said, cost him $750.

Actually, the prescription said, "Get out of doors and take part in an active sport." The doctor warned him of an impending serious breakdown if he did not follow orders, so Heffner took to the golf course. He found it an investment in the future, one to which he owed his life.

Last Summer, the Heffners, who always came to The Sterling Inn, in South Sterling, could not come because of Mr. Heffner's failing health. And this Fall, he died.

During his lifetime, he was always active in the church, whether he was at home in Maplewood, N.J., or at The Sterling in South Sterling. He was a familiar figure at the South Sterling Methodist Church, which he supported with his presence and his gifts.

The Heffners thought of the Poconos as "wonderful country," and they loved the people and the church here. And so the Wesley E. Heffner Memorial Fund came into being at South Sterling at his death, at the request of his family.

The officials of the church have not yet decided what the fund, which has reached generous proportions, will be used for. A large portion of it will purchase some lasting memorial to a man who found this part of the Pocono Mountains to be the setting for his happiest moments.

State launches dope battle

Pennsylvania has taken what we believe to be its first truly significant step against narcotics by the naming of Lt. Col. Paul A. Rittelmann, retired state police official, to lead the battle against drug traffic.

Gov. Raymond P. Shafer has ordered the transfer of narcotics law enforcement from the Health Department to the State Police.

The newly formed agency will now wage full scale war against the traffic of drugs, those individuals who use narcotics and those who sell the dangerous substances.

As the agency grows it will undoubtedly add badly needed manpower to enforce anti-narcotics laws, make arrests and in general cut down on the ever mounting drug traffic in the Keystone State.

As of this moment the agency, now in the process of being transferred from the Health Department to the State Police, has been badly undermanned. Thus, it has found its task next to impossible in the field. It has been very difficult to make arrests on narcotics charges in the past and even tougher to make the charges stick in court.

But, there should be a vast improvement in this department in the near future, after Rittelmann obtains needed personnel and turns the long needed agency into a workable organization.

In the very near future we can expect support in the long-overdue campaign against drugs and curtail the fear which shocks people and localities alike when narcotics charges are leveled and drug traffic is uncovered.

The formation of an anti-narcotics fighting unit, with teeth in its makeup, is truly a fine decision, one that is long overdue.

However, it will be up to everyone to assist Rittelmann and his new agency, if the anti-drug warfare is to be a successful operation.

Death penalty upheld

Capital punishment, which in recent years has seemed to be on its way out, has been given new support by decisions of the supreme courts of two western states affirming its constitutionality.

This time, the courts, in joining the debate, have given new arguments to those who believe the supreme penalty is a proper sentence for willful murderers.

In upholding murder convictions, the high courts of California and Washington both ruled, and for different reasons, that the death penalty did not constitute "the cruel and unusual punishment" outlawed by the Eighth Amendment to the Constitution.

The California court found that the long history of capital punishment and its wide acceptance precluded a ruling that it is cruel and unusual. The Washington court pointed to a fact that those who regard the death penalty as unconstitutional frequently overlook — that the death penalty is really constitutionally protected.

The court noted that the Constitution accepts capital punishment, notably in the much-quoted Fifth Amendment wherein it proves that "no persons shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous, crime, unless on a presentment or indictment," "nor... for the same offense, to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb," and "nor to be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process...."

Since the courts are being bombarded with petitions to outlaw the death penalty, the Washington court significantly pointed out that the question is not really a judicial one, but a legislative one particularly when moral and practical grounds are present.

The trouble with letting a court outlaw capital punishment is that it would leave the states with unrealistic alternatives.

For in some states a life sentence can mean as little as 14 years, a rather small price to pay for murder in the first degree. Only the legislatures could change that.

Joy of memories

It is exactly 40 years since I was first hired by a newspaper. The paper was the Daily News, New York. My position was copy boy, $12 a week. I sat on a bench with other copy boys and we fidgeted and giggled as editors and reporters worked to draw a newsworthy first edition together.

When someone within the bare cavern referred to as the City Room bawled "Boy!" we hurried to his side. If he wanted tomato juice for his hangover, we dog-trotted to Surkin's Restaurant, next door, and got it. Some asked for a pint of sauerkraut juice. It was always a matter of life or death.

The News crouched between dusty loft buildings on Park Place. It was a noisy articulate newspaper with lots of circulation and little advertising. The big stores dismissed us with: "Only punchchewers read your paper." If this canard were true, the least we should have settled for was gum advertising.

The Sports columnist was Paul Gallico. Mark Heiling was the Broadway columnist. There was a lopsided distinction between ranks; Capt. Medill Patterson was the publisher; the editor was Colonel House. John O'Donnell and Jack Miles and Doris Fleeson and Nick Kenny and Red Dolan were the reporters. There were others, but the eyes of memory cannot decipher them through mist.

Special stories

Our stories were special. We had no interest in writing about President Herbert Hoover and his suggestions for helping the Germans to pay their war debt. Nor did we care too much (except for photos) about the German zeppelins which crossed the Atlantic, like floating cigars, at 70 miles per hour.

If a married man was in the wrong boudoir, we dispatched reporters and photographers. This was our territory. If an old gaffer like Daddy Browning married 15-year-old Peaches Browning and gave her a gander on a leash as a wedding present, the story was ours. When a blueblood like Kip Rhinelandt eloped with a girl who was part Indian and part Negro, our heroes were present with Graphic cameras and enough flash powder to blow the honeymooners to their eternal reward.

On my first day, I showed up with an editorial about the appointment of Grover Whelan as police commissioner. It was entitled "A New Broom Sweeps Clean" — a marvel of subtlety which came out of my head. The city editor didn't look at it. He tossed it into a wastebasket.

In the early morning, all copy boys made "books." These were sheets of cheap yellowing copy paper with abused carbons sandwiched between. The atmosphere, all day and all night, was exciting. Harry Nichols, assistant city editor, answered the phones, took the news tips, and assigned the reporters. Teddy Dalton, fair and fat, faced him from the other side and assigned photographers.

Irene Corbally Kuhn hammered out stories on a desk splintering with age. Gang murders made good assignments, and no matter how few the clues we insisted that it was the work of the Detroit Purple Gang. The ceiling was high; the lights were coned from hanging green shades; the men's room was where bets were placed.

When the big presses began to spin at 7 p.m. the tired building was prevented from falling down by the two sturdier buildings which flanked it. The noise was like a bowel cramp deep in the earth. I ran and ran, faster and faster. Between editions Mark Heiling taught me how to write a story. Frank Carson, day city editor, permitted me to write one paragraph fillers. I clipped every one to show my father.

Seasoning of insanity

There was a seasoning of insanity in everything we did. When a Harvard sophomore committed suicide, we sent a sob sister to Massachusetts — not to get the story — but to find out if he kept a diary and to steal it. Tom Cassidy would show up loaded, roll a sheet of paper into the typewriter, then place his head on the moving carriage and write the thing with his eyes closed.

Nobody ever read a book unless it was dirty. At that, it was tough slogging getting through the clean parts. James J. Walker was mayor, and when he donned pearl gray spats and a black derby, we all went out and bought them. On time, of course.

Our copy boys, if nothing else, were polite. One of them was at the reception desk when a man in beard, toga and sandals got off the elevator. "Whom do you wish to see?" he said politely. "The city editor," the man said. "Thank you," our copy boy said, "and who shall I say is calling?"

"Jesus Christ," the man said, stroking his silken beard. The copy boy got to his feet at once. He stuck his hand out. "Glad to meet cha," he said. "I've heard a lot about you."

Stories Behind Words

By William Penfield

Swashbuckler

In Elizabethan times, dashing young blades of London gathered for what were called "brag" fights. Each participant was equipped with a sword and "buckler" — a small shield used to ward off the blows of a swordsman.

The dandies' fights were ostentatious affairs in which the participants, with a great show of fury, struck each other's bucklers, producing much noise.

Striking a buckler with a sword was described by the verb "swash," a word imitating the sound produced. Any young blade who participated in the mock fights came to be called a "swashbuckler," a name that was transferred to any swaggering braggart.

Equipment also needed

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Ottaway News Service

WASHINGTON — The only thing holding up the start of the Boston-New York rapid rail experiment is people.

By contrast, the problem in launching high-speed trains between New York and Washington has been equipment.

But Dr. Robert A. Nelson, who heads the Office of High-Speed Ground Transportation, is hopeful that the test runs can begin on both segments shortly.

The "people" delaying the Boston-New York runs are not potential commuters. It's assumed the customers will be standing in line for the new four round-trips-a-day service.

Human combination

Rather, it's a combination of people connected with the Penn Central-New Haven merger and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Penn Central's merger was fraught with uncertainty right up to the January 1 ICC deadline for assuming the New Haven operation. This made it difficult to complete final planning for the Boston-New York service. The turbine-powered trains built by United Aircraft for the experiment are ready to go, however, at any time.

Complicating matters further, the ICC recently refused to go along with a new schedule of reduced service filed by the New Haven Railroad a month ago. The High-Speed Rail operation had been keyed to the new schedule since the commission earlier this year authorized sharp reductions in service.

Normally, when the ICC balks at accepting revised schedules, it orders an investigation which can take as long as four months. But since the New Haven proposal is essentially along lines approved by the commission months ago, there's a faint hope that someone in authority will set matters straight in a matter of days.

"I have no doubt that if we can settle some of these last-minute problems, we can agree with the Penn-Central on the operation of the turbo-train," Dr. Nelson said in an interview.

"Everything may fall into place in the next few days," he added, "and it's certainly possible

Roscoe Drummond

No hasty decisions

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the last in a series of five articles prepared by Roscoe Drummond and son Geoffrey on President-elect Richard M. Nixon, the problems he will face in office and how he will act to solve the many difficulties confronting the United States.)

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon will put his own personal stamp on the presidency. What it will be already can be partly seen.

A clue is his choice of political heroes. One man he most esteems and whose foremost qualities he would emulate is Winston Churchill.

That is a Nixon goal. No one pretends it is a Nixon achievement. But two of Churchill's special qualities are visible in the President-elect—one in practice, the other in promise:

In defeat, defiance; in victory, magnanimity. These Churchill preached and lived. These are the traits Nixon would like to think of as his, too.

He already has proved himself triumphantly defiant of defeat after losing the presidency in 1960, after losing the California governorship and after becoming convinced he was through, announcing in a tape-recorded interview that he would never run for public office again.

But he defied his own dejection—and won. That was in the Churchillian mold.

What, then, will be the special Nixon qualities which will shape his presidency? Obviously, we can't know which qualities will dominate because the office shapes the man as well as the man shapes the office. But, having known and reported Richard Nixon from the time he came to Washington as a young congressman in 1947, we venture this answer:

His will be deliberate administration. When we think back over the many times we have talked with Nixon and watched him in action as congressman, senator, vice president and presidential candidate, we think first of him as a man of unusually considered judgement and it is evident that this quality flowered in recent years.

His mind is innately deliberative and his decisions will reflect a high degree of deliberate planning. This is the kind of planning which went into the choice of his cabinet and White House staff. He once told us during the campaign that he figured the most important decisions he might make in four years would be his choice of top personnel. He demonstrated this deliberateness in taking six weeks to pick his cabinet.

There will be no hasty decision-making in the next few years. Some may tend to downgrade

Don MacLean

Teaching or hiding?

WASHINGTON — Did you see the item in the newspapers the other day about all the male teachers in New York City who confess they are teaching school for no other reason than that it gives them draft deferments? (New York, of course, has no franchise on this — it's happening elsewhere in the nation).

Well, I don't know your reaction to such news, but I know mine. A friend who travels regularly often sends me, as a gag souvenir, the air-sick bag he finds in the seat pocket of his plane. On reading about the New York teachers, I was so glad I had such a bag in my desk.

Really, now, is this not the end? I wonder what classes these draft-dodging, so-called teachers give instruction in. Do you suppose they might have the nerve to attempt to teach, say, civics, or, heaven forbid, American history, citizenship or patriotism?

Any man who would duck his service obligation and, at the same time, have the crust to claim he's making youngsters into better citizens should have his head pounded with blackboard erasers until chalk comes out of his ears.

Tough to respect

Kids are supposed to respect their teachers, but how does a kid respect a man who won't serve his country? Unless, of course, the kid doesn't know his teacher is a draft dodger. No doubt 99 per cent of these teacher-slackers failed to mention that little item when introducing themselves to their classes.

Just for fun, ask your child if he has a young, male teacher. If he does, then get him to stand up in class and say, "Sir, my parents would like to know if you're 4-F or if you have a draft deferment." (Or, if you're afraid such careful calculation, but when it comes to another Vietnam-type decision or a new Arab-Israeli confrontation, the quality of deliberateness will be prized.

Nixon's will be an open-minded administration. This is quite apart from whether it will be an "open" administration, eagerly letting the public in on everything that doesn't violate security, good and bad. That remains to be seen. But Nixon is open to new ideas, to innovative ideas, to dissent and to the strong views of those who will argue with him. We know creative men on Nixon's personal staff who would have left him before now if this weren't so.

His will be an orderly administration. Certainly more orderly than John Kennedy's but not as formal as Gen. Eisenhower's. Example: he picked the best administrators he could draft to man the massive machinery of the federal government and surrounded himself in the White House with four strong-minded, creative thinkers in Dr. Lee DuBridge (science), Dr. Henry Kissinger (foreign policy), Dr. Paul McCracken (economics) and Daniel Moynihan (urban affairs).

This doesn't mean that good administrators can't think, but it shows that the orderly Nixon is aware that the best thinkers often can't administer so he has put them where they are free to think without having to administer.

His will be an activist administration. Nixon is not as intent upon or as fascinated by the exercise of power for its own sake as LBJ. But he is not becoming president to preside over four years of do-nothing. He said in his campaign that the next president must "take hold of America before he can move it forward." He intends to do so. The nation needs it and Nixon must do it if he is to succeed as president.

And, finally, Nixon's Administration may prove to have the Churchillian quality of magnanimity in victory. Unlike the non-existent relations between Truman and Eisenhower and the superficial relations between Eisenhower and Kennedy, President Johnson and President-elect Nixon have both been magnanimous toward each other and closely co-operative.

Thus magnanimity has begun at the top. Some think of Nixon as the gut political fighter who thinks the only place to hit is the solar plexus. They have not yet come to know Nixon the winner.

If Nixon can make magnanimity the hallmark of his administration in motives and acts, his could be a great presidency.

the guilty teachers might retaliate by flunking your child in English, or something, then ask the question yourself at the next Parent-Teachers Assn. meeting).

One New York teacher in the news accounts was quoted as saying he didn't like teaching, that he wasn't really suited for it and that he wasn't very good at it. But it was the only way he could keep out of the army. In answer to people who might say, "Well, that's one way to solve the teacher shortage," I say this: Maybe it is, but do we want teachers like that?

Perhaps right after giving that anonymous statement to the press, the teacher returned to his class and said, "All right, students, and now we will learn about Nathan Hale." Instead, that teacher should be kept after school and made to write on the blackboard 500 times, "I am a coward."

Some people think that now we should destroy the Pueblo. Do they mean, sink the ship after the secrets have been stolen?

You can get odds on anything in Las Vegas. For the next Middle East war one bookie is giving the Arabs and 1,300 tanks.

LBJ says he hopes to give Nixon a balanced budget. If he could do it for Dick, why couldn't he do it for us?

You can't say Cuba is being ignored. All the major airlines serve it.

The government will give the president $200,000 per year, but it'll allow you only $600 to raise a child!

been held up by technical problems and contract disputes between the Budd Co. which will supply the Penn Central with the experimental cars, and the Westinghouse Electric Corp., which will equip some of them.

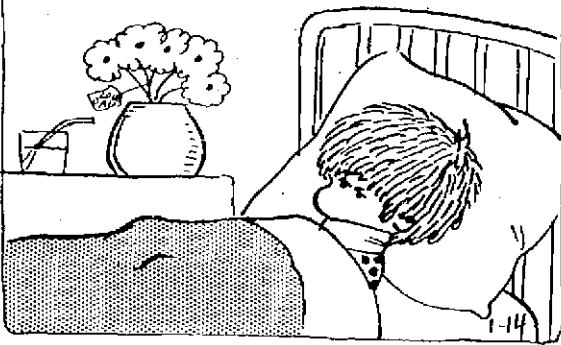

The Metroliner experiment has been financed in large part by the Penn Central which spent about $22 million on the 50 cars and nearly $35 million upgrading its tracks. A two-year federal subsidy will help the project operate. During this time, Uncle Sam plans to survey reactions to see if modern, fast and dependable rail service is something the public will buy.

Officials say that "nominal amounts," by comparison, have been spent to upgrade the New Haven roadbed system. They credit the unique nature of the turbine-powered trains built by United Aircraft. Because of their unusual A-frame suspension system, these trains are able to travel over conventional roadbeds at speeds of up to 140 miles per hour. They are said to be capable of 170 mph speeds.

It remains to be seen whether they will whiz commuters from New York to Boston regularly in four and one-half hours or less.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Sammy Davis, who pioneered the now dated Nehru-jacket, turned up in Vegas in a mink coat with shoulder bag. Jim Nabors is sporting a dual quick-rich sign: sealskin coat and a Rolls-Royce. Every Tom, Dick and Sammy Davis has a Rolls-Royce. Gwen Verdon bought a $550 blue-dyed calf coat at Europhilia—for her husband. Same day and shop. Tony Curtis bought himself a $145 camel-tinted leather jacket with side-zipper. No one's seen Joe Namath's famous front-paged mink benny since the so-called sale-publicity.

"Hadrian VII" has been a London smash for two seasons and now seems about to settle down on Broadway profitably; it is a play about the Vatican which shrewdly removes serious anti-Catholic bias by its presentation as the fictionalized neo-pendream of a novelist who sees himself as a Roman pope in easy imaginative spasms.

It is irreverent without being sacrilegious, impertinent without insolence, wittily serious and editorially impudent in its closing, and least effective, scenes; but above, through and under it all it is a spectacularly splendid vehicle for Alec McCowen, giving Broadway one more galvanically gripping performance in this season more notable for star-acting (James Earl Jones in "The Great White Hope." Donald Pleasance in "The Man in the Glass Booth") than great dramaturgy.

The play is based on Frederick William Rolfe's magnum novel, "Hadrian the Seventh" (Rolfe was a social misfit who maintained his longplay literary durability, starved during his lifetime but whose novel prevailed and in this dramatization by Peter Luke seems to have proved his boast).

On several levels "Hadrian VII" saves itself from the silly solemnity usually gloomed onto screens and stages in dramas about the Papacy; its fantasy-edge, a surface of intelligent nonsense whirled by Papal musings of Hadrian; its earthy dream-details, the illusions of truth couched in jests, the brilliant staging by Peter Dews, its simplified inkings of scenic Vatican majesty which make their visual points without filling the Helen Hayes Theatre's stage with overwhelming, brooding attempts at overstating a monolithic gloom, all add up to a lightly stated, not trivially offhanded, pinwheel of ecclesiastical iconoclasm. Ann Landers

Haunted by old flame

Dear Ann Landers: I've been married 12 years to a wonderful man and we have a beautiful family. I know I must be crazy or I wouldn't be writing to you. I am hoping you'll print my letter and the pure disgust of reading it in the paper will cure me once and for all.

These past few months I've been having these wild daydreams about a former love whom I have not seen in 10 years. He was a handsome heel, a heavy drinker, an inveterate liar, and I have congratulated myself a dozen times for having had the good sense not to marry him.

These ridiculous daydreams started to haunt me about three months ago when I heard "our song" on the radio. I began to relive the glorious moments we shared. All those dead passions, long forgotten, began to stir anew. Now I can't get the roller off my mind.

Please tell me how to rid myself of this ghost from the past?

NUTTY JOYCE

Dear Nutty: When you feel a daydream coming, substitute in its place a real life episode—one of those beauts that made you decide not to marry the louse. Remember that a mental rerun of a romantic fantasy can be twice as good as the real thing. And keep this column handy, as a reminder that your sane self wrote for help.

Dear Ann Landers: The other evening three couples (including my husband and me) were leaving a restaurant. One of the men was wearing a bulky tweed jacket. He seemed to be having a difficult time getting his arm through the sleeve of his coat. I was standing beside him and the sensible thing to do, I thought, was to help him. So I did.

The man's wife gave me such a dirty look I felt my face get red. Later that evening I asked my husband (in private, of course) if I had done the wrong thing. He said, "Yes, a woman should never help a man with his coat unless she is a servant."

I am still unconvinced. Is he right?

VA. FROM PA.

Dear Va.: Manners are nothing more than common sense and consideration for others. You used common sense when you helped your friend with his coat, and in my book, your manners are fine.

Confidential to Sally In The Alley: Never mind about what's wrong with your mother. What's wrong with your house that you can't invite a boy in? A car is for transportation, not a place to entertain company. And in the alley yet! If you wrote to me for approval, you rattled the wrong cage.

Girls get involved

NUMBERS GAME: (Q.) You suggested to "Confused and Worried" that she date only boys she could get serious about—with an eye to marriage. I think you're overlooking other important facets of dating.

In my book all girls fit into three groups: (1) Girls you'd like to get serious with. (2) Girls you might like to get serious with after you are better acquainted. (3) Girls you definitely DO NOT, under any circumstances, want to get serious with. I date all three kinds and get a different kind of pleasure from going with each.

I date No. 1 girls and think beautiful thoughts about them. I date No. 2 girls to get to know them better. Occasionally I date a No. 3 girl because she has a certain turn of mind, or quirk of personality, or approach to life and love that I don't find in other girls.

In view of this how can you counsel an emerging spirit to hide from experiences that will help him to develop into a well-rounded adult?

M.M.M. of Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas

(A.) I was answering a girl. You are not a girl. Some boys and men can date girls in your Group 3 and keep away from too-emotional involvements.

It's not that easy for a girl. Girls are usually more emotional than boys. Their hearts are likely to be closer to the surface. When they're of marrying age and date boys in Group 3, they can get hurt when things don't work out.

You are probably a nice guy, but what if a girl who considers herself nice dated you and just accidentally found out that you ranked her as No. 3? She would definitely be hurt! And she just might tell you what she thought of YOU.

I still believe it's smart for girls to date boys who will be husbands if love blooms out of what started as friendship.

And I hope you don't fall in love with one of your No. 3 dates. You may find yourself changing your philosophy.

DRY NAILS INCREASE WITH AGEING

Finger and toe nails that Peel, split and break can be both a disturbing physical and appearance problem. Scular citizens chiefly have this trouble. Nail flexibility depends primarily on the amount of moisture retained.

Because of low winter temperature outside and heating inside, humidity drops, permitting the surrounding air to absorb moisture from the skin, leading to excessive dryness. Avoid contacts with drying liquids, and every night massage a good nourishing cream into the skin and on the nails.

News of new fabrics

By MISS DAWNE SENSINGER
Extension Home Economist
STROUDSBURG — Bonded fabrics will continue to improve in quality. And these self-lined fabrics will be more popular than ever. When bonded fabrics came to the market a few years ago, they presented many problems. Dry cleaners got complaints on separation of fabrics that were bonded together. Problems of puckering, bubbling, and peeling resulted. Trade associations have proposed that all bonded fabrics meet the requirements of the United States of America Standards Institute. You'll often see this term abbreviated USASI. Adhering to the Institute's standards will produce bonded fabrics which meet the following standards:

They (1) must hold up under a reasonable number of washings and or dry cleanings.

(2) won't shrink beyond a certain acceptable limit, (3) won't crack, peel, pucker, or bubble, (4) will retain drape and ability to breathe, (5) won't stiffen, (6) won't absorb odor, (7) will resist discoloration, (8) will have no "strike-through" or evidence of adhesive.

To be sure a garment has been tested and meets these standards, check the garment label for some certification. But if the guarantees are to mean anything, you must take the responsibility of following the care instructions on handtags and labels of the new and improved bonded fabrics.

Clothing specialists with USDA and Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service predict that these industry standards can be expected to upgrade the quality of bonded fabrics. These higher standards may mean the biggest future for bonded fabrics is in untapped fields—men's wear, home furnishings and industrial goods.

Bonded fabrics are not the only new and improved fabrics. Permanent-press cotton fabrics are a real boon to the homemaker—that is, until she goes to alter clothes made with these fabrics. Then alterations become noticeable—especially when hems are lowered, leaving tell-tale creases.

To help the consumer with this problem, Agricultural Resource Service scientists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture are developing a new finish which allows old creases and seams to be ironed out and new ones ironed in. If hemlines should go down, lengthening skirts made of this new permanent-press cotton would be no problem for the homemaker.

Legion Auxiliary reviews gifts, plans benefit

EAST STROUDSBURG — Members of the George N. Kemp Post of the American Legion Aux. passed around pictures of their adopted boy and girl at Scotland School at their January meeting.

Two new members were accepted. Mrs. Joyce Reisenwitz and Mrs. Mary Altomose were presented with 25 member pins.

Reports were given on the Children's Christmas party and other Christmas activities. The unit sent 500 Christmas cards and stamps to Wilkes-Barre Veterans Hospital for patients to send to families and friends. A benefit party was announced for Feb. 22 from 2 until 4:30 at the Legion Home followed by a spaghetti dinner.

The Baby's Named

Rae Lynn and Rea Leigh Brown, Staff Sgt. and Mrs. James E. Brown of Rapid City, S. D. announce the arrival of twin girls, Rae Lynn and Rea Leigh, born Dec. 17 at the Ellsworth Air Force Base.

Their mother, Kathy Ann Brown, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Merritt Hamill, 37 South Courtland St., East Stroudsburg.

Take a boxy room and unsquare it with paint. Make one wall the focal point with the application of a bright or warm paint color. This brightly painted surface — in contrast with a paler, cooler hue on the other three walls — will attract the eye, and give the illusion that the wall is closer to the observer than it actually is.

goes down one.

This is merely a summary of what happens if South plays the hand as described. Many declarers would undoubtedly play this way and go down, but, if they did, they would have only themselves to blame for the outcome. With proper play they would bring home the slam.

The point is that the trump finesse — tempting though it may be from force of habit — is a bad play because it jeopardizes the chances of making it. Even if the finesse won, the final outcome would still depend on a successful heart finesse.

What it all boils down to is this: if East has the king of hearts the slam is made; if

West has the king it is lost.

The trump finesse is an optical illusion, since the location of the king of spades has nothing to do with whether or not the contract can be made.

Declarer should go up with dummy's ace of spades at trick

two, lead the queen of hearts, and finesse. Whether East covers or not, he cannot stop

South from discarding a club from dummy on the third round of hearts. South later loses a trump trick to the king, but that is the only trick he loses.

Robyn Clark, Pocono Mountain High School's latest Rotary Exchange student, points out her hometown of Tamworth, New South Wales, Australia, to George Webb, high school guidance counselor, left, and John Grose, chairman of Mount Pocono Rotary Club's student education program.

Aussie lass endures 'drop' with smile among friends

SWIFTWATER — When Miss Robyn Clark of Tamworth, Australia, left her homeland it was 115 degrees, and when the 17-year-old Rotary Exchange student arrived at Pocono Mountain High School the temperature had dropped almost 100 degrees.

The brown-haired, brown-eyed Aussie lass might have found the Pocono Mountain weather chilly, but certainly not the reception.

"All the people I've met so far are very hospitable and friendly," Miss Clark said Monday as she began her first week of studies at Pocono Mountain High School.

Miss Clark came to Pocono Mountain High School for her senior year under the student exchange program of the Mount Pocono Rotary Club, chaired by John Grose of Mount Pocono.

She is currently staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Gravit of Tannersville.

Intending to major in English and history, Miss Clark has run into the usual problems of a citizen from "down under" land coming for the first time to America.

Charming and outspoken, the young Australian simply doesn't understand why Americans can't fathom her when she says, "I'm a dinky die."

"That means 'the real McCoy' or 'it's a fact,'" Miss Clark said.

Robyn, whose father operates a wholesale fruit and produce business in Tamworth, said that Australia doesn't depend on Britain for financial or defense aid.

"We're not yet independent enough to become a republic and we still sing 'God Save the Queen,'" Robyn said.

She pointed out that Australia has just as many troops, based on population percentages, as does America in Vietnam.

The difference between American and Australian boys?

"American boys have more extra curricula activities in school than Australian boys," she said. "And many more American boys wear glasses than Australians."

Robyn thinks that Rugby is twice as rough as American football. "There's no padding in Rugby," she said.

"And the way you drive over here," she said. "On the wrong side of the street and also the wheel on the wrong side of the car!"

Coming down to that brief subject of bikinis, Robyn said that some Australian girls who have gone to other countries as exchange students have left their bikinis home by request.

"Girls in Australia go in for very brief bikinis," she said. "I myself think that the one piece costume is much nicer."

Robyn had been in Sydney just before she came to the states, and she remembered how some American G.I.'s never came into the motel in which she was staying until about 5 a.m.

"And then they would sleep all day long and do the same thing the next night," she said.

Grose explained how the Rotary Exchange Club Program operates.

Exchange student candidates usually come from the upper third of their class," Grose said. "We also look for good citizenship records, deportment, and abilities in public speaking and a knowledge of the political scene."

The exchange students pays only for his or her air fare and a Health and Accident Insurance Policy which amounts to $62.50 a year, Grose said.

According to Grose, the Rotary Club pays an exchange student $20 a month for living expenses.

In the past, Grose sent a Pocono Mountain High School student, Wanda Starnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Starnes of Tannersville to Celaya, Mexico where Wanda had the rare opportunity of seeing the 1968 Olympics.

Grose has two more exchange student candidates waiting to go to the country of their choice.

"The student pool works through 12 different Rotary Districts," Grose said. "After the students are selected they're given their preferences of the country in which they want to study, and they also state their second and third choices."

County set to phase out surplus food distribution

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Commissioners Monday announced that today and Wednesday will be the final two days in which surplus food distribution will take place.

After Feb. 1, the county will participate in the food stamp plan. This program will be maintained through the Department of Public Welfare and the Monroe County Board of Assistance.

Commissioner Mrs. Nancy B. Shukatis announced that she received notice that the Tri-County Mental Health Mental Retardation Association has re-estimated the anticipated costs for the fiscal years of 1969-70 to be in the neighborhood of $467,000, more than $75,000 greater than costs originally discussed.

Mrs. Shukatis said she will be in communication with commissioners of Carbon and Pike counties to discuss the new development.

She also requested that MR-MR Director Thomas Foley meet with the Monroe County Commissioners Thursday to discuss the increase. She said the increase will definitely affect Monroe County's share of the cost of the program.

Attorney Harry F. Lee submitted his resignation from the Monroe County Children's Bureau Advisory Board. Lee's term on the board was to expire on Dec. 31 of this year.

The commissioners gave their approval to the commissioner-appointed insurance committee to proceed with a committee to draw up specifications for the advertising of bids for a new county insurance plan.

In other business, the commissioners acknowledged receipt of a letter from the Economic Development Council, Wilkes Barre, supporting the reconstruction of Rt. 209 as a four-lane highway.

Commissioner Chairman Elwood Hlatze announced that at a meeting with officials of the State Highway Department, the need to construct the highway as a four-lane thoroughfare was acknowledged by highway officials, who said that unfortunately no money was available to accomplish the task.

Also received was a letter from James D. Shafer, commander of the George N. Kemp American Legion Post, East Stroudsburg, requesting an appointment to present a resolution to fly the flag at the Doughboy statue in Courthouse Square at half staff on the day of the burial of any veteran in Monroe County.

Planner resigns position

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County Commissioners announced Monday the receipt of a letter of resignation from Jonas L. (Jay) Snyder from the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission.

Snyder had been the assistant planning and zoning director of the county.

The letter of resignation had been addressed to Douglas E. Williams, newly appointed administrator of the planning and zoning commission, and was dated Jan. 9. No formal announcement of the resignation was made, however, until Monday by the commissioners.

When contacted Monday afternoon, Snyder said he had no comment to make concerning his resignation or what his future plans may include.

Williams said, "The only thing I can say is that I have received his resignation. I haven't received any comment from the commission planning and zoning members' itself. The commission has no comment."

Snyder's letter stated: "It is with mixed emotions that I am submitting my resignation. A firm foundation for planning has been established in Monroe County and I am proud that I had a part in it. It is my regret that I will not be able to see this effort come to full fruition."

"Because of greater professional opportunities elsewhere, I plan to accept one of the positions which has been offered to me in recent months. This letter shall be deemed written notice of resignation as specified in the Administrative Manual."

"I trust that at some time I may again serve the citizens of my native county."

Developers ask Stroudsburg to supply water to complex

STROUDSBURG — During a brief meeting of the Stroudsburg Municipal Authority Monday night, a discussion centered around the request for water and sewage service from the Fox Ridge Realty Company.

The developers plan to build 250 apartment units in the vicinity south of Rt. 191 partly in the borough and partly in Stroud Township.

According to County Engineer Edward Hlatze, the matter boils down to a question of setting up a rate schedule for the service if the authority grants the request. Hlatze said it will also be a question of who will install a pump, which will be necessary, and who will maintain the pump.

The matter will be referred to the authority's consulting engineers, Albright & Friel, Philadelphia, for study and a report.

Authority members seemed to be in agreement that the Fox Ridge matter would, when eventually settled through a decision, set a policy for all future developers who wish to enter the borough.

The policy will concern the matter of setting rates in the case of a development and in the financing aspect of installation and maintenance of pumps. Some members expressed concern over financing the pumps by the authority, feeling the expense was too high.

In other matters, the authority voted to continue with the same officers for 1969 as those who held the positions last year.

Russell C. Hughes will remain chairman; Daniel G. Warner, vice chairman; Jackson L. Kerlin, secretary; and Millard A. Marsh continues as treasurer.

It was announced that the budget for 1969 will be discussed at the February meeting of the Authority.

Barrett renames township planner

BUCK HILL FALLS — Barrett Township Supervisors Monday night re-named George Huguenin to the planning commission for a five-year term.

The action brought questions regarding the number of times meetings are held by the planning commission, park commission, and municipal authority. Supervisors said that none of the township's appointed bodies meet on a regular basis.

Roger Lindsey said that the last park commission meeting was held in 1967 and three planning commission meetings in 1968 were reported in writing to the supervisors.

No comment was made on the municipal authority.

Supervisors were told that the garbage truck needs an engine overhaul. Stanley Bender, roadmaster, said the truck had 22,000 miles on it which is actually four times the wear on the engine because engine force to pack each load. Bender also said that the truck is using approximately four quarts of oil each day of operation and compression power had dropped from 125 pounds per square inch to 50 pounds per square inch in each cylinder.

Bender was told to check on prices for the job and make his findings known to the supervisors as soon as possible.

Township pay rates were listed at $2.50 per hour, equipment operators; $2.35 per hour, truck drivers; $2.05, laborers.

Police Chief William Everett will receive $6,100 per year. A patrolman will be paid $5,200 starting when he is hired on May 1, 1969.

Salary for the garbage man was set at $6,200 per year.

The supervisors paid $6,000 on the garbage account loan; $7,400, on the tractor loan; $3,000 was placed in saving certificates for the fire company and bills totaling $2,213 were paid.

Textile company's management calls walkout 'wildcat strike'

STROUDSBURG — Labor and management tossed charges and counter charges Monday in the one-day-old walkout of 23 employees at Beaufab Mills, Inc., a Tricot jobbers plant at 1801 West Main St., Stroudsburg.

Bernard Turk, president of Beaufab Mills, termed the walkout a "wildcat strike," the second in the last two months to be caused by the firing of an employee because of insubordination.

Turk denied a union report charging management was the cause of a deadlock in salary negotiations. "We have been getting along very well up to now in the negotiations and everything was progressing according to schedule when the discharge halted the meeting," Turk said.

Lewis Rubino, a representative of United Textile Workers of America, charged management with "dragging its feet" over negotiations and further stated that management fired Earl Landheer, a knitter because he was "a leader in the union."

Rubino said that labor and management have had six meetings since October, all resulting in an impasse on negotiations. "We wanted the company to arbitrate but it wouldn't agree," Rubino said. He added that the company has never made an offer.

The employees voted 23 to 14 to strike Sunday, according to Rubino. He added that 14 employees showed up Monday.

Turk, who is currently in New York to attend his mother's funeral, said that a considerable number of workers reported for work Monday. However, there were pickets on duty outside the plant.

Turk said that management is willing to resume salary negotiations immediately.

According to Rubino, teamsters have stopped making deliveries at the plant. Rubino will be in Stroudsburg Wednesday or Thursday for a meeting with management which will be set up by Charles McHugh, a federal mediator.

Rubino said that Beaufab Mills, Inc. is a small plant with a workforce of 42 employees.

There have been two elections since 1967, according to Rubino. The union lost the first one by four votes but won the second by three votes.

Ten making first appearance

West to miss first All-Star game

BALTIMORE (UPI)—For the first time in his nine-year National Basketball Association career, Jerry West will not be on the floor for the West team in the NBA All-Star game tonight.

The brilliant, injury wracked guard of the Los Angeles Lakers has been sidelined by his pulled muscle woes, and his place is being taken on the squad by Gail Goodrich of the Phoenix Suns.

The change says a lot about the 1968 version of the All-Star game. The year of expansion in the NBA is the year of the brand new all-star.

Of the 24 All-Star players who arrived here Monday, 10 of them are making their first appearance in the classic. Most of them, like Goodrich, owe their chance to the rapid expansion of the league.

Goodrich played behind West for two years as a Laker. Now, as a fulltime starter for the Suns, he's averaging better than 20 points a game.

Others in Goodrich's category include Dick Van Arsdale of Phoenix and Jon McGlocklin of Milwaukee. The two grew up 10 miles apart and starred together at Indiana University. McGlocklin got his opportunity at regular play with the Bucks, and Van Arsdale achieved stardom, like Goodrich, with the Suns.

Other new All-Stars benefiting by expansion or the openings it created on their own teams, include Lou Hudson and Joe Caldwell of Atlanta, Jeff Mullins of San Francisco, Bill Cunningham of Philadelphia, and Earl Monroe of Baltimore.

Two rookies have also made the teams. Elvin Hayes of San Diego is the starting West center. The 6-foot-9 rookie from Houston leads the NBA in scoring with a 30-point average. He established himself as a top defensive star, and converted the rockets from a doormat to a genuine playoff contender.

Westley Unseld of Baltimore has done for the Bullets and Monroe and Gus Johnson what Bill Russell did for the Boston Celtics and Bob Cousy and Bill Sharman 13 years ago. The burly Louisville graduate provided rebounding strength, gets the ball to Johnson and Monroe, and their scoring talents have catapulted the Bullets from last to first place in the Eastern Division.

The starting line-up for the West will be Hayes, Len Wilkens of Seattle and Jerry Sloan of Chicago at guards, and Don Kojis of San Diego and Elgin Baylor of Los Angeles at forward.

Russell, playing in his 12th straight All-Star game, will tap off against Hayes. The East starting line-up includes Jerry Lucas of Cincinnati and John Havlicek of the Celtics at forward and Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati and Monroe at guards.

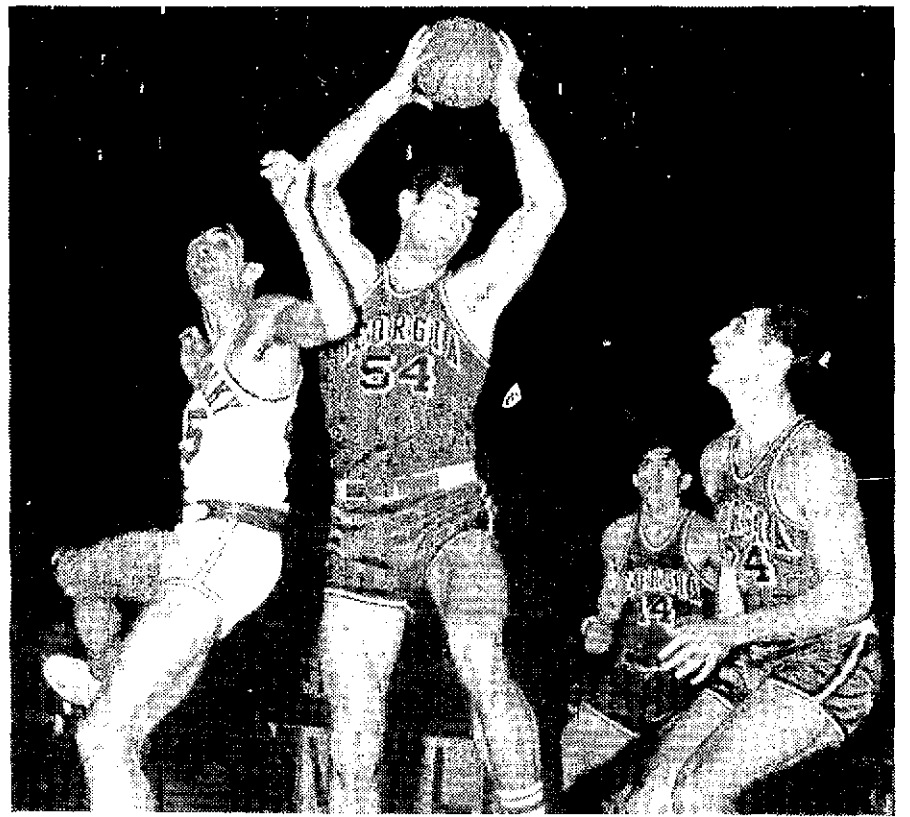

Other players on the East include Willis Reed of New York, Johnson of Baltimore, and Dave Bing of Detroit, who is unlikely to see much action because of leg injuries. The West squad includes Rudy LaRusso of the San Francisco Warriors and Wilt Chamberlain, now with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Gene Shue of the Bullets coaches the East, and Richie Guerin of Atlanta coaches the West. Shue, like many of his players, owes the All-Star spot to expansion. He was named to replace Alex Hannum, who jumped to the American Basketball Association.

The players held their first practices Monday afternoon. Earlier, the NBA owners voted to defer any decision on expansion for one year, at their annual mid-winter meetings. Commissioner Walter Kennedy said he had valid bids from six cities but declined to name them.

Kennedy also reiterated that no unusual procedures will be taken to ensure that 7-foot-1 Lew Alcindor of UCLA is signed by the NBA. The rival ABA is reported to be considering pooling its resources to sign Alcindor.

Georgia's 6-11 Bob Lienhard, who scored 27 points in a losing cause, holds the ball away from Kentucky's Larry Steele as fellow-Bulldog Herb White (24) watches. Kentucky defeated Georgia 88-68 after leading at halftime by 38-29. (UPI Telephoto)

Selection system is 'unfair'

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Richie Guerin, of Atlanta, coach of the West team in the National Basketball Association All-Star game Tuesday night, said Monday he thinks the system used to select the teams is "unfair" and allows players to get into the starting line-up on reputation.

Guerin said every player and coach on the team should be permitted to select the squad regardless of their teams.

Under the current system, a panel of sports writers in NBA cities chooses the first eight players, and the coach of the All-Star team chooses the remaining four. No individual team is permitted more than three All-Star players, and every team is guaranteed one.

"I think it's unfair to omit players who should be on the team so that every team can have a player," the Hawks' coach said.

"I think the players and the coaches would take the responsibility of selecting the team very seriously, because all the players think it's a great honor to be on the team," Guerin said. He said they would be less swayed by past reputation than the current selectors.

The Atlanta coach said it was "a definite mistake" that Bill Bridges and Zelmo Beaty of Atlanta and Nate Thurmond of San Francisco were left off the West team, and Kevin Loughery of Baltimore left off the East team.

He said that on the basis of this year's play, he would have chosen rookie Westley Unseld of Baltimore to start for the East over Bill Russell of Boston.

Guerin said his West team, generally considered the underdog, would be weaker at guard, but would have a little more speed at forwards, although the East forwards have higher scoring averages.

Guerin's rival, Gene Shue, of Baltimore, said he thought it was fair that every team be represented in the All-Star game.

Asked if he thought he was the favorite, he cracked: "Just don't favor us by 18 points."

The Monday afternoon practice session was extremely informal, and four players did not even show up: Oscar Robertson and Jerry Lucas of Cincinnati, Dave Bing of Detroit, and Wilt Chamberlain of Los Angeles.

Hawkins unanimous pick in ABA

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI)—Minnesota's Connie Hawkins was the only unanimous choice for the East squad of the American Basketball Association's second annual All-Star game in Louisville, Ky., Jan. 28, it was announced Monday.

Commissioner George Mikan said, however, seven members of last year's team were repeaters on the All-Star team.

Hawkins, the ABA's individual scoring champion and most valuable player in 1967-68, polled a perfect 50.00 points from sports writers.

Joining Hawkins in the East's starting lineup will be Mel Daniels and Bob Netelicky of Indiana, Darrel Carrier and Louis Dampier of Kentucky.

The second five includes Les Hunter, Don Pritchman and Duane "Skip" Thoren, all of Miami; Walt Simon of New York and Charlie Williams of Minnesota.

Barbara Rubin successfully passed a Tropical Park stewards' exam to become the world's, first regular girl jockey. Nineteen-year-old Barbara still has one final hurdle to overcome before getting her permanent license. She'll get an opportunity to participate in one race — perhaps this week — and her license will depend upon that performance. (UPI Telephoto)

College games only eight minutes longer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI)—The Football Rules Committee opened its annual three-day winter meeting Monday and heard a report that college football had reached an all-time high in spectator interest.

The report was made by committee secretary David Nelson, athletic director of the University of Delaware, and was part of the committee's review of the sport before determining whether any rules should be changed.

Nelson based the statement that the game had reached a high point for spectators because of the increased number of plays, average yardage, passing percentage and offensive statistics.

The report refuted the generally held belief that college games had materially increased in length of playing time because of the rule that the clock should be stopped on first downs.

Nelson said the overall increase from 1967 to 1968 was only eight minutes. He said in 1967 the average length of a game was two hours and 29 minutes while the past season it was two hours and 37 minutes. And during the last five games of the year per team the average length was only two hours and 32 minutes due to improved officiating mechanics.

Categories in which college football reached its highest point in history were total offensive yards, passing yards, kickoff return yardage, percentage of passes completed, total touchdowns, touchdown passing, total points, total field goals and passing percentage.

Nelson gave figures to back up his report. He said averages for two teams during the past season included 42.4 points a game as compared with 36.8 in 1967; 5.77 touchdowns a game compared with 1.95 the previous year.

Namath, Jets have league on top

AFL all-star game suddenly means more

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI)—Suddenly, the American Football League all-star game this coming Sunday means something.

It used to be a sort of battle between "who's that?" of the second best league in pro football.

Not any more. Broadway Joe Namath and his New York Jets put the AFL on top of the football mountain in Miami Sunday with a 16-7 beating of the National Football League champion Baltimore Colts.

"The game yesterday proved that pro football is a game of people rather than a game of leagues," said Kansas City coach Hank Stram as he ran the Western all-stars through a light workout Monday.

"We just simply had to win over the public. We've had stars all along who could play with them (the NFL)," said Stram. "If a guy is a great football player, he's not any better if his helmet says NFL and not any worse if his helmet says AFL."

Namath, who spent Sunday night celebrating the Jet victory over the NFL champs, was expected to arrive here Monday night or early today to begin workouts as starting quarterback of the East all-stars.

Quarterbacking the West in Sunday's nationally televised game at 2 p.m. will be John Hadl of the San Diego Chargers.

Namath and 10 of his Jet teammates will be on the 34-man East squad including pass receivers George Sauer and Don Maynard and tight end Pete Lammons.

Both teams made 28 field goals. But on the foul line the Kingsmen were 18 for 30 as compared to 14 of 28 for the losers.

Rams' Carollo added to West

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Joe Carollo, offensive tackle for the Los Angeles Rams, Monday was added to the West team for Sunday's National Football League Pro Bowl game by coach George Allen.

Allen said Carollo replaces Bob Vogel of the Baltimore Colts who suffered a severely bruised leg in Sunday's Super Bowl game at Miami.

If Ray Welsh's timetable is right Notre Dame High School in East Stroudsburg will be playing a varsity basketball schedule in two years.

Welsh hopes to arrange some games with freshman teams in the next couple of months, take on junior varsity teams next year and then into a varsity program the following year.

Some of the other sports the school hopes to participate in the near future are soccer, baseball and track. At the present time there are no plans for a football program.

Dr. John Eiler and Jack Kist, athletic directors at East Stroudsburg State and East Stroudsburg High respectively, are attending a meeting of the Men's Athletic Directors of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

The second national conference for secondary school athletic administration men is being held at the National Education Association building in Washington, D. C. The conference opened Sunday and runs through Wednesday.

Among the topics of conversation are procedures, purposes, national forum, discover trends, limit on sports, crown control and legal actions.

Three Pocono ski areas made the list of the "Top 20" of America's most lovable ski areas.

Big Boulder finished in the top five; Buck Hill Falls and Camelback in the top 10.

In previous years, North America's areas were rated for their steepest trails and liveliest after ski-places. But the new study has proved a hitherto unmeasured ski-area dimension; the application of "Tender Loving Care" to the needs of the recreational skier.

The top 10 in order are Anthony Lakes, Baker, Ore.; Mad River Glen, Waitsfield, Vt.; White Pass Village, White Pass, Wash.; Bachelor Butte, Bend, Ore.; Big Boulder; Buck Hill Falls; Camelback; Mt. Telemark, Cable, Wis.; Bear Valley, Bear Valley, Calif.; and Gore Mountain, North Creek, N. Y.

Miss Betty Lou Murphy and Miss Catherine O'Brien, both members of the health and physical education department at East Stroudsburg State, have been chosen to represent Pennsylvania in the fifth National Institute on girls' sports. The clinic will be held on the campus of the University of Illinois on Jan. 21-25.

Miss Murphy is the women's basketball instructor as well as the women's team coach at ESSC. Miss O'Brien both teaches and coaches women's gymnastics. At the institute, she will participate in the gymnastic judging section.

The institute is sponsored by the Division for Girls' and Women's Sports of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation. Qualified teachers from every state will attend clinics headed by national sports experts on instruction in basketball, gymnastics and track and field.

attendance following the Jets' victory Sunday.

"I know that Joe's a fine fellow off the field as well as a great player," said Stram, scoffing at stories of Namath's New York nightlife.

"I'm one who believes on first hand information and he's been nothing but a gentleman every time I've been with him. He is a credit to pro football all around."

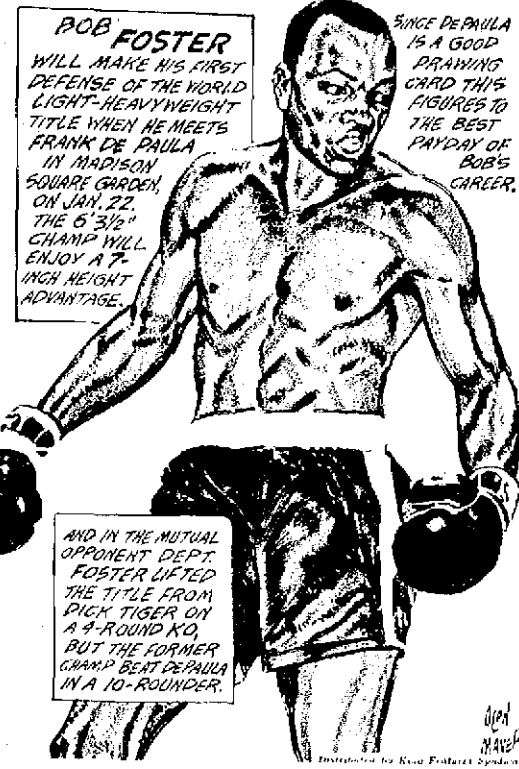

Stram said that the West team, which practiced once on Monday, will hold two-a-day workouts to try and offset the passing advantage which the East will have.

Eleven players from Kansas City and 10 from Oakland, which won the Western Division title of the AFL, dominate the Western all-stars.

"That win yesterday was a tremendous thing for the AFL," said Oakland offensive tackle Gene Upshaw. "The only thing was that it should have been us out there winning." New York squeezed by Oakland in the last quarter of the AFL title game.

500 welcome home Jets

NEW YORK (UPI)—A highly partisan and obviously dedicated crowd of about 500 football fans, led by Mayor John V. Lindsay, was on hand at Kennedy Airport Monday to give a rousing welcome home to the world champion New York Jets.

Led by Coach Weeb Ewbank, 13 of the triumphant Jets stepped from a chartered plane shortly after 2 p.m. after a flight from Miami where they defeated the Baltimore Colts Sunday, 16-7.

"They were welcomed into a terminal with rousing chant from admirers: 'We're No. 1' and to the tune of 'On Wisconsin,' played by a five-man orchestra.

Many of the welcoming crowd expressed disappointment when they learned that Jets' star quarterback Joe Namath was not aboard the chartered flight.

Jets leave Miami minus trophy, ball

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI)—The New York Jets, victors over the Baltimore Colts in Sunday's Super Bowl football game, headed home Monday minus what they came to get: the world championship trophy.

Bob Fleischer, who helped out as a trainer during the Jets' 10 days of pre-game preparations here, said the big trophy and the game ball were forgotten when the team left its hotel headquarters. The Jets remembered them when they reached the airport, where a chartered plane was waiting to go.

Fleischer went back and collected the items and put them on a regular commercial flight. The team has agreed to present the game ball to the American Football League.

Quarterback Joe Namath, who won a fire engine red sports compact car for being the game's most valuable player, wasn't with the team when it boarded the plane. Namath has business interests in Miami. Frequent South Florida's horse racing tracks during the off season, and is expected to play in the AFL's all-star game in Jacksonville Sunday.

Santa Clara kicking heels in ratings

NEW YORK (UPI)—Santa Clara's Broncos continue to kick their heels in college basketball and the brash Broncos won't rest until they get in the same corral with the mighty UCLA Bruins.

The Broncos, unbeaten in 14 games and a heavy favorite to repeat as champions of the West Coast Athletic Conference, held on to the No. 3 position Monday in the sixth weekly United Press International major college ratings.

Coach Dick Garibaldi's charges picked up a pair of league wins the past weekend but so did UCLA. Coach John Wooden's Bruins, running their season record to 11-0, were the unanimous choice again for the No. 1 rating.

Based on a 10-4-4-7-5-4-3-2-1 point system, UCLA got the maximum 350 points from the 35-member UPI Coaches Rating Board. However, runner-up North Carolina and Santa Clara both gained a little ground on the Bruins.

North Carolina (11-1) received 278 points while Santa Clara got 238 points in the balloting. The fourth and fifth positions also remained the same as a week ago as Davidson stayed at No. 4 with 214 points and Illinois, even though it dropped its first game, stayed No. 5 with 151.

Kentucky moved up one notch to sixth, displacing Kansas. The Jayhawks, an upset loser to Missouri, slipped to ninth. Kentucky received 153 points and Kansas 95.

Jets' Rush interested in coaching Patriots

BOSTON (UPI)—Boston Patriots President Bill Sullivan will confer with assistant coach Clive Rush of the New York Jets later this week as a likely successor to Mike Holovak as the Patriots' head coach.

The Patriots Monday confirmed reports from Miami that Sullivan had obtained permission from the Jets to talk with Rush, the champions' offensive backfield coach.

Sullivan was not expected back in Boston before late today or early Wednesday, the club said, but he was expected to confer with Rush "before the weekend," though no specific meeting date had yet been set.

The Patriots' 13-man Board of Directors voted in secret session last week to fire the veteran Holovak both as coach and general manager despite several years remaining on his long-term and highly-lucrative contract.

The club said Holovak had not yet indicated whether he would accept another post in the organization and the one-time Boston College All-American and Chicago Bears player was unavailable for comment. The Pats were 3-10-1 and 4-10 during the last two years and Holovak's overall mark was 52-46-9 since 1961.

Sullivan stressed that while he already had made preliminary contact with the 37-year-old Rush, he might still interview other candidates for the vacant coaching post.

NBA delays expansion for year

BALTIMORE (UPI)—The National Basketball Association's Board of Governors has decided to put off any further expansion for at least one year, it was announced Monday by commissioner J. Walter Kennedy.

The governors, holding their annual mid-winter meeting on the eve of the 19th annual All-Star Game, heard a report from the NBA expansion committee which recommended deferring further expansion until at least the beginning of the 1970-71 season. The NBA recently has added four teams, two each in the last two seasons, and the committee said a study of this expansion should be made before additional franchises are added.

Kennedy said he has received bids from six cities for franchises but he declined to name the cities.

The governors' decision scuttled plans to add two new teams to the league each season until the loop reached 20 franchises.

The expansion committee is composed of club owners Jack Kent Cooke of Los Angeles, Robert Breitbard of San Diego, Ambrose Lindhorst of Cincinnati, Fred Zollner of Detroit and Richard Block of Phoenix.

Casey alert, spirits good

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI)—Casey Stengel, the former New York Yankee skipper whose doubletalk proved to be one of baseball's biggest pluses, is alert and in good spirits, a hospital spokesman said Monday.

The 78-year-old Stengel Friday underwent surgery for a perforated peptic ulcer. He is listed in serious condition because of his age.

"Mr. Stengel is eating well," the spokesman continued. "The food is in the form of liquids and is limited in quantity but he's eating well."

Hat pin horses

Now that Santa Anita has opened, it's time for Professor Murray's ("A Winner Every Time Or We Give You A New Horse") handy household manual of post-race excuses, a time-saving device which takes the stuttering out of explaining when a "Can't-Lose" mare wobbles down the track, quits at the quarter-pole and takes half the field with her.

These are for tight-quarter situations where you can't escape your comrades for critical minutes just before post time to come back waving a fistful of bills and say, "I had him! Talked my way to the window when I noticed the 4-horse was walking sore."

Here is the multiple-choice list for losers:

1. "He (choose one) didn't care for the (a) track; (b) the crowd; (c) the other horses; (d) any of them."
2. "The boy rode him (choose one) like a (a) Chinaman; (b) elephant boy; (c) truckdriver. Alternate version: "The boy must of thought it was a stepphase."
3. "The horse was bothered by (choose one) the (a) other horses; (b) the wind; (c) blowing paper; (d) the altitude; (e) the longitude; (f) the temperature; (g) the humidity."
4. "The (choose one) (a) lugged in; (b) lugged out; (c) lugged in and out."

McMahon called

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Cleveland Barons defenseman Mike McMahon was recalled Tuesday by the Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League.

McMahon was loaned to the American Hockey League Barons early in December.

5. "The (a) stable wasn't trying; (b) rider wasn't trying; (c) horse wasn't trying." (Or, in certain circumstances, all three weren't.)
6. "He (choose one) likes to (a) come off the pace; (b) to be on the pace; (c) to be neither on nor off the pace."
7. "The (choose one) (a) horse was in trouble last time out; (b) the jockey was in trouble last night out; (c) the owner was in trouble last income tax."
8. "The reason he lost was (choose one) (a) some clocker lied; (b) some liar clocked; (c) some clock lied."
9. "He lost because (choose one) (a) the track handicapper gave him too much weight; (b) the track handicapper gave the other horses too little weight; (c) the track handicapper couldn't write a race for Man O'War and eight milk cows."
10. "I was wrong because (choose one) (a) I was lied to by same owner; (b) I was lied to by someone who said he was some owner; (c) some owner was lied to and let me in on it."

More Questions

There is also the "How Was I To Know?" series of gambits. As, How-Was-I-To-Know:

- a) They'd let a sore horse like that on the track?
- b) The jocks were giving a benefit for the boy on No. 4?

VolvoBAYLOR MOTORS
SHOWROOM
N. 9th St. Stroudsburg

Instead of showing everybody how rich you are, show everybody how smart you are by owning a Volvo from John Baylor Motors, N. 9th St., Stroudsburg.

With a Volvo you won't be faced with the problem of "new, years-ahead styling". Volvos doesn't change from year to year. And this year's Volvo will look as new as next year's model.

Volvo is fast (it out-accelerates every other compact in its class). Volvo is economical (it gets over 25 miles to the gallon). Volvo is tough (it lasts an average of eleven years in Sweden). Volvo is America's biggest-selling imported compact. Which one you buy depends largely on how many doors you need. And the cars in the 140 series do them in three different fashions—two-door (1455) and four-door sedan (1445), and five-door station wagon (1455).

The basic interior design of the 140 series Volvo hasn't changed much this year. In all, the chair-high bucket seats adjust seven different ways: up and down to three different heights, forward and back up to nine inches, soft or firm support on your back and spine and tilt. The seats are covered with textile-reinforced vinyl.

The 140 series Volvos are compacts that don't suffer from compactness. Volvos are roomy. It's been done by efficient use of space rather than extravagant use of metal.

"Come in and test drive one today," says John Baylor, "find out for yourself why it's the biggest selling compact on the market today."
